library is a DLL used by the Windows audio subsystem to communicate with sound hardware. The library provides low-level access to the audio API. It may not be a great idea to use it as a replacement for the native DirectSound API, as it has not been tested in the same manner as the native API and is subject to change. A simpler option is to use the WASAPI library, which also provides access to the hardware via the same API. Q: $window inside router.navigate is empty I have a SPA with 2 views: login and dashboard. In one of the views I have a menu, in the menu I have login and dashboard button. When i click on dashboard button I want to use $window object to make a new route: `var app = angular.module('app',['router']);` `app.config(['$routeProvider',function($routeProvider) {` `$routeProvider .when('/',{ templateUrl:`

'view/dashboard.html', controller: 'loginController' }) .otherwise({ redirectTo: '/' }); }); function loginController($location, $window) { console.log($window); } Problem is in the loginController function, when i try to use $window function I get an empty object... I want to add a new route in dashboard view. How can I achieve this? A: Since you use Angular router, you should use the routing directives and use the $window object with the $location service instead. function loginController($location) { console.log($location); } Note that by default, Angular's service $location is injected to the controller constructor. So, you need not to inject $window object into the function (570a42141b
