Custom plugins The Autodesk Exchange Apps Store was founded in 2002 and is part of Autodesk's Exchange product line. A custom plugin is a tool or application that can communicate with AutoCAD using standard user interfaces (UI) such as dialog boxes and toolbars. Plugins are contained in archives (.zip) and installed on the user's computer. The Autodesk Exchange Apps Store provides a database and interface for storing and managing plugins. The Autodesk Exchange App Store can be used to create, launch, and manage custom plugins. The installed plugins are shown in the Plugins menu and can be run without opening the software. Plugins can be grouped into packages, which are collections of plugins related to a specific application. Package names contain a package ID and version. The user can search for plugins by product and version. Each product has a directory in the App Store for storing custom plugins. The main purpose of the App Store is to allow users to search, install, and launch custom plugins. There are four kinds of custom plugins: Applications - Autodesk Exchange Apps are custom applications that can be used in AutoCAD. The applications may be plugin-

Components - An.XCF component is a customized icon, button, menu, or gadget that can be used in AutoCAD, AutoCAD LT, AutoCAD WS, and other Autodesk products. Components can be added to drawing and plotter displays and toolbars. Plugins - An AutoCAD plugin is a self-contained program that can be installed and run within AutoCAD. A plugin may be user-created, or it may be a registered plugin provided by Autodesk. Runtime - Runtime plugins are applications that are not designed for AutoCAD, AutoCAD LT, or AutoCAD WS. Licensing and distribution of custom plugins is subject to a custom plugin agreement with Autodesk. Custom plugins require the same licensing as their host applications. For example, a custom AutoCAD plugin requires a paid license for AutoCAD, while a custom AutoCAD component requires a free license for AutoCAD. I decided I needed to talk to my wife about what she was going to do next since she didn't seem to have plans to do anything. I wanted to be clear that the next steps weren't going to be anything other than going to her sister's house with my son.
