damped oscillation with velocity change proportional to the oscillation frequency, and with an exponential time constant of the particle oscillation. Resolution and performance of the sensor is evaluated in vitro and in vivo. A mean frequency resolution of approximately 2 Hz is measured in vitro. In vivo studies show that the sensor can measure human heart rate in the frequency range 0.1-5 Hz, and blood pressure in the range 30-380 mmHg. In addition, in vivo measurement of heart rate, respiration and blood pressure fluctuations, recorded simultaneously, show good agreement with a conventional pressure sensing finger cuff. Respiration and blood pressure, measured separately using the OA sensor and a conventional blood pressure cuff, are in good agreement. Due to the simplicity of the sensor design, it can be fabricated using microelectromechanical systems (MEMS) process and be used as a disposable sensors. Its potential use in non-invasive monitoring of heart rate, blood pressure and respiration is demonstrated.(1) Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for the flame-spraying of pre-coated structural parts with a flame-sprayed coating. More particularly, it relates to a method for the flame-spraying of pressure-loaded parts with a flame-sprayed coating, which is capable of overcoming the problem of lack of the adhesion of the coating and of achieving the adhesion of the coating by adjusting the coating-forming conditions. (2) Description of the
